

Hello Everybody!

Building News: Hallelujah! That cold snap almost broke me!! I can't tell you how much energy the warm weather has given me back. I am so grateful! Please throw your windows open and get some fresh air into your suites for at least a couple of minutes today!

Thank you for all the feedback we are receiving about the painting in the hallways. Kylee has met with many people individually and some groups. I think hallway color is an even hotter topic than Covid these days! Any and all feedback Kylee receives is being documented, and once all the projects are completed together, we will revisit. The first hallways will be recarpeted this week. Lessons we learn from the 15th and 14th floor will be used to make the process better for the rest of the building. We ask that you not visit the floors while work is in progress. Kylee will send each floor specific information about timing in advance of your floor being completed.

Thank you also for all your valuable feedback about the kitchen. Based on the 38 pieces of feedback – some confidential and some not – your responses to January's offerings were that 80% of people that ordered food enjoyed their meals, and 89% said the presentation was good or great. We have used your specific feedback to continue to improve meals and will continue to do so. I will let you know how February's feedback goes. Great job to Chris, Monica, Caleb, Lorne, and all the caring ladies that deliver the meals to our residents.

Personal info: Even though the cold weather meant the kids had more than anticipated indoor time on their break, the positive side meant they did lots of leveling up on their video games. It was nice to be home for a couple of extra days for a long weekend for the kids. We have some really fun board game hours and did lots of outside activities this weekend.

Stay safe and have a great week!!
